

It got a little loud during the drawings at the annual CRDC Christmas Party as board members, staffers and guests enjoyed a great night of festivities.

Members of the CRDC board of directors and the Head Start policy council met in joint session in December to consider several matters of mutual interest.

The proposed plans for spending Community Services Block Grant (CSBG) funds by CRDC was the topic up for discussion during this January hearing in Forrest City.

Cong. Berry listens as Kenny Gunn (left), CRDC construction supervisor, and James Daniels (right), Weatherization coordinator, explain some well-honed Weatherization methods during a recent visit by the congressman to the agency's weatherization headquarters.

A new board member was elected during the public meeting in Wynne in January. Shown above (standing at left) is Robert Wilford, CRDC executive director, as he addresses a large gathering at the Wynne Head Start.

Phyliss Fry, executive director of Community Action Program for Central Arkansas and the former Head Start director, conducts joint training for the CRDC board of directors and Head Start policy council.

Seniors from the Tuckerman area gathered to socialize and enjoy a snack during the recent open house at the Tuckerman Senior Center.

Lloyd Price (left), chief operations officer; Marla Davis, rental housing manager; and Ashley Bowie, housing transition manager, chat briefly at the Weatherization offices in Jonesboro during a visit by Cong. Marion Berry.

Human services personnel gathered at the CRDC training facility along with agency managers for a training session prior to the start of winter LIHEAP (utility assistance).

A huge crowd of teenagers was on hand in December when the Teens of Northeast Arkansas (TONE) group met in Jonesboro for its annual conference. Above, the group participates in a "Tootsie Ta" exercise.

ROMA training is an essential task at CRDC. In the photo above, a large gathering of staffers representing all the major departments in the agency are gathered for the session at the admin training facility.

Katherine Price (left), daughter of CRDC's new COO, Lloyd Price, gets the grand tour of the new administration building from Robert Wilford, CRDC executive director. Katherine was making her first visit to the administration facility. Her brother, Will, made the visit earlier in the year.

Lois Staggs, recently retired from CRDC, receives honors from Robert Wilford, CRDC executive director, during ceremonies at an aging services training luncheon.

The food was lip-smackin' good when Regions Bank hosted a Demos-catered luncheon for the CRDC admin staff in Jonesboro.